Its length is sometime; four inches. The shores of the province abound in fish, the greatest proportion of which are excellent eating. The most abundant is the snapper, which varies in weight up to thirty pounds, is short and thick, somewhat resembling in shape the bream or perch. It is very highly esteemed, and is sometimes brought up to Adelaide in large quantities. The size of the fish, however, and its vigorous resistance when booked, attract the attention of. the sharks which are very common in the gulfs; and the fisherman is often disappointed when about to take in a fish, by an enormous shark relieving him of the trouble. Mackerel and a species of mullet are also taken in great numbers, as well as a small whitefl us l led fish resembling in shape and exterior appearance the salmon-trout. A very extraordinary (ish is sometimes caught, which, from its colour mid glistening appearance, has been named the silver-fish. It is about eighteen inches long, and is without scales. In lieu of teeth it has an apparatus resembling two pairs of millstones, with which it grinds its food, and it is furnished with a pendulous piece of cartilage in the shape of a letter T inverted, hanging down under the...
